

Everyone desires to feel secure in their relationships this could mean marriage or simply strictly platonic. However, the reality within the world of today is if it doesn't work out, then we are off to the races. This could mean pursuing other relationships, divorce or simply ignoring the current. Either way they all have the ability to be marriage as well as relationship killers... Not every fight is a battle, not every voice heard means one is correct in their stance or opinion. If there is any hope, it is in knowing and understanding what can harm, destroy, taint or simply kill a relationship. This book is not a remedy or a solution. It is, however, an insight of day to day matters in which everyday people face or avoid. Everyone knows that in order to relate you must first be willing to participate in some form of openness. This source of relatable is called communication. The lack of interpersonal communication often is what can and will destroy any relationship this includes marriage. Love takes work but identifying the many formats of love takes understanding and patience. In this book, you will find subjects and topics of the sort that can and will destroy any relationship in addition to solutions in the restoration or building of having or creating those same relationships. Marriages are being tested daily, and many are given up and falling for the baits in a sort. Meanwhile, society is making recommendations that relationships are not needed for sex, love and marriage. Within this new book, you will learn techniques and skills through words and action of communicating, resolving and preparations for any type of relations. A ship rock back and forth even in high waters and so there is hope and docking your relationship is only a choice and option.
